5 Growing inequalities

This year, we accepted that the world as we knew it had been altered. While 2020 saw us learning to adapt to new ways of living, in 2021, we leveraged our experience, resilience, and inquisitiveness to become adept at these new ways.

Of the billions of searches we see every day, 15% are brand new[1] — from new user segments, across categories, and for all kinds of queries. And as people turn to the internet to fulfill their needs, they are faced with limitless information and abundant choices. Shoppers are increasingly relying on digital to evaluate their options and make sense of this torrent of information. For example, in 2021, we saw a 41% increase in search interest in "which brand is good"[2] as people looked to build their consideration sets.

As marketers, we play an integral role in helping consumers make more confident decisions. This means understanding their priorities and preferences. Our recent research found that 83% of Indian consumers agreed that they would purchase from a brand that provided helpful and trustworthy information when they were exploring options.[3] By offering relevant information, brands can help shoppers who face decision paralysis. This also means that trusted sources are more important than ever. People are increasingly concerned about privacy, security, and transparency, and are willing to invest time and resources into ensuring that brands align with their value systems and beliefs.

At Google, we're humbled to see people trusting us to help them with their queries. Whether they're existing internet users looking to reevaluate their lifestyles, or newcomers with fresh concerns, people all over India and the rest of the world rely on Search to answer their questions. In 2021, "sustainable" rose to its highest search interest within the last five years in India[4] as consumers now expect the brands they choose to share the same higher purpose.

Searches like these offer us unique insight into what people really care about. We hope that this edition of our Year in Search India report can help you make sense of the billions of searches that happen and guide your business strategy to be better prepared for what's next. We hope that our takeaways will inspire you to translate insights into action, and evolve your business strategies to be better prepared for 2022 and beyond.

Lives re-examined

Following the sudden disruptions of the pandemic, people emerged in 2021 with a realization that some changes weren't temporary after all. This prompted a sense of introspection and a reevaluation of their values and lifestyle choices. As a result, they looked for more comfort and stability in their lives, and shifted their focus to the things that matter most to them.

People have made many waves of change on the global and local level over the past few years. As people try to embrace new adventures in their lives, they're researching their lifestyle choices, once familiar ways of life, and the comfort of established routines.

In a recent survey, half of consumers in APAC said the pandemic has made them reevaluate their lifestyle choices, and more than a quarter said they're more likely to make changes that approach to finance and savings, time with loved ones, and a greater sense of purpose.[1] Around the world, 1 in 3 people are considering a career change to be prepared for a new long-term reality, and 1 in 4 prioritize towards emotional acceptance and dedicating time to that.[2]

From small everyday upgrades to more major life decisions, people are reexamining their lives and making changes to align with and accessorize more closely the values they're aligning with what truly matters to them. In fact, 76% of Indians are now eating healthy food more often than they did before the pandemic.[3]

Evidence of this shift is also seen in the "Great Resignation," a trend that's emerged in the US and Europe, where 1 in 4 people are considering changing jobs or even changing jobs or planning a career change. In India, 87% of professionals surveyed are actively looking for new jobs.

Such significant, widespread shifts in life priorities among consumers could indicate long-lasting trends. The changing core values and priorities of people are often a driving indicator for the rise of new trends. Trends that have emerged from businesses that businesses need to care about. Given how many people are reassessing their careers in APAC, employee well-being and mental health are also becoming more attractive and important to companies.

As people spring-clean their lives, there's a window of opportunity for businesses to reconnect and convince. How can you persuade your customers and employees to continue to make your brand a part of their lives? How will you show them the value they can bring to their newfound priorities?

Acceptance of a blended life

Even as restrictions ease, it seems a blended way of living is likely to be the norm for many people in the months to come. 1 in 3 APAC consumers in India looking at hybrid work models beyond the pandemic.[4] Searches reflect this adaptation to a more flexible future for work and daily activities as people begin taking charge of their own time and spaces, particularly at home.

Search interest in "hybrid workplace" grew by 350% as people consider returning to offices in a hybrid setup.

Search interest in "online consultation" rose by 50% as consumers look for online options for healthcare.

Search interest in "DIY [something]" and "how to make" grew by 30% and 40% respectively. Similarly, YouTube search interest in "start [niche]" rose by 80%.

Search interest in "[something] at home" / "second hand saving" rose by 25% as people look for more economical ways to get around the high costs of ownership.

Reevaluation of finances

We see people changing the way they look at their finances. While some have chosen to put their savings to work through investments, others searched for deals, discounts, and ways to save more money.

Search interest in "get [something]" grew by more than 70% as people seek to have their furry family members join them on their staycations and time out.

People are seeking to build stronger familial relationships, evidenced by their increase in "with children" searches by more than 40% while search interest in "quality time" rose by 50%.

Quality time with loved ones

People in India have placed more value on spending time with their families, and value time spent with loved ones that is being financially secure or successful. This is echoed in Google search interest looking for moments of quality time with their loved ones.

Search interest in "gifting" grew by 41%, suggesting increasing awareness of the importance of physical wellness.

People's desire to keep their loved ones safe is encouraging more Indians to consider buying vehicles. Search interest in the auto category of vehicles grew by 37% year over year.

In India, search interest in "wellness" grew by 27% and this includes mental wellness, emotional wellness, and physical wellness.

Self-care, introspection, and the reevaluation of lifestyle choices

Consumers today have wellness through the pandemic, valuing physical health, mental health, and emotional well-being. As they start lifestyle choices, we see increased focus and consideration for holistic wellness and the goal of their overall well-being as a huge role in their decision-making processes.

Search interest in "health insurance for family" grew by 41% as people look for more comprehensive coverage for their loved ones while search interest in "online store" rose by more than 50%.

MARKETING HAS A LESSON

Your brand is back on the ladder; gain and retain

From inactive behaviours and short-term solutions, to a greater appreciation for the things that matter most, we've seen how people are emerging from the pandemic with updated priorities. As people reevaluate their choices, brands and businesses need to reevaluate their role in this. Here are a few key can-use pillars not just externally to their customers, but also internally to their employees.

Ritesh Idnani
Vice President, Marketing for Google APAC

Brands can win with a mindset that is rooted in an ecosystem of disruption. In order to enable people in the region to achieve better, more equitable outcomes in the face of increasing disruption, businesses need to stay curious and cultivate a desire to understand their customers' needs, and be empowered to respond to unclear and refine an understanding of users' true needs.

Ensure your brand makes the list as consumers reevaluate their options

Today's shoppers look for the things that make their days with what they need and value, up to 75% are buying from newly discovered brands.[5] Consumers are looking for more options and are more open to suggestions when they purchase decisions. Search terms as a top keyword for providing them with relevant and helpful information.

Tap into the power of Search and automation to grow your brand's discoverability.

Fifteen percent of queries every day are brand new searches.[6] The ever-growing keyword mouth-type is in Google Search and Search Partners, you're able to automatically adjust your campaigns to show ads for the most relevant searches, including for your products, and act on new opportunities as they arise.

When consumers research, they don't always have a specific product in mind yet. Responsive Search Ads can help you find the product in the spotlight with personalized ads that are relevant to the shoppers.

MyFlightSearch, an all-in-one travel booking service, successfully used Responsive Search Ads to achieve 11% incremental clicks and 10% reduction in cost per booking.

Abhishek Singh
Co-Founder and Chief Operating Officer, MyFlightSearch Inc.

"Ad copies are the face of a brand on Search and at MyFlightSearch, we've always been focused on delivering the best results for our advertisers. Based on relevance, Responsive Search Ads were an obvious choice. With the ease of setting up multiple headlines and descriptions, we were able to make these ads best in class and more relevant to the search query, which resulted in great marketing and business metrics."

2.

Create data-driven marketing strategies to keep up with evolving needs.

Consumer behaviour is changing; allows you to act on what matters most to consumers in the moment, and adopt a test and learn approach for sustainable optimization.

Rising Retail Categories and Google Trends allow you see what the world is searching for at both a local and global level.

3.

Use direct-to-consumer strategies to own your brand presence and experiences

Consider owned, direct-to-consumer channels to brand.com and mobile apps to create digital touchpoints that can provide more personal experiences, and showcase your brand's values and consumer offerings without compromise. They also give you the first-party consumer insights and data your platforms need to power brand-owned out-even more.

3.

Don't overlook your internal stakeholders

During times of reevaluation and changing attitudes, and retaining top talent becomes ever more critical to ensuring sustainable business growth.

1.

Prioritize building a diverse and inclusive workforce that will not only help to attract and retain top talent, but also increase innovation and profitability.

2.

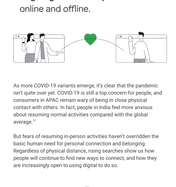

Recognize the importance of purpose-beyond-pay. Nurture your employees as internal stakeholders and representatives of your brand.

Bridging distances

The pandemic kept countless people physically apart, and consumers quickly found ways to adapt. But in 2021, we saw the sense of separation deepen. As a result, consumers moved beyond finding brief moments of connection to finding new ways to express themselves and nurture deeper, more ongoing relationships, both online and offline.

As more COVID-19 variants emerge, it's clear that the pandemic isn't quite over yet. COVID-19 is still a top concern for people, and consumers in APAC remain wary of being in close physical contact with others. In fact, people in India feel more anxious about resuming normal activities compared with the global average.[1]

But fears of resuming in-person activities haven't overridden the basic human need for personal connection and belonging. Regardless of physical distance, rising searches show us how people will continue to find new ways to connect, and how they are increasingly open to using digital to do so.

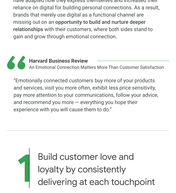

One example is how people have started to adapt the way they express their affection. In lieu of physical touch or time spent together, people are searching for gifts they can send their loved ones, and inspiration for the right words to wish them a happy birthday or anniversary. An October 2021 survey found that one in two APAC consumers are still choosing to meet their loved ones virtually instead of in person,[2] and searches for online group activities like escape rooms, food festivals, and concerts are seeing consistent growth.

As the world grows more dependent on digital technology to form meaningful human connections, brands need to move on from thinking of digital platforms as purely functional channels or just an online front end. Instead, consider how you can get longer-term value out of connecting meaningfully with your customers online.

In marketing, we often say the medium is the message. But that doesn't mean that a channel should do all the hard work for you. How are you ensuring you're reaching the human behind every channel strategy? More importantly, what can you do as a brand to help facilitate better, deeper, more meaningful relationships for your consumers?

SEARCHES

Online expressions of affection

Love languages are keeping up with the changing times, with people searching for ways to show affection without in-person interactions. A recent survey showed that 63% of Indian respondents took online first inspiration on how to celebrate differently amid the pandemic, and some have even found new brands to help them do so.[3]

+120%

In India, search interest in "online celebrations" grew by more than 120%.

Digital for personal connection

Technology is enabling people to connect in innovative ways, sparking interest in virtual versions of activities such as group meals, escape rooms, and concerts. Even festive celebrations are going digital, with close to one in two Indians surveyed saying that they don't expect to host events at home for the upcoming holiday season, despite doing so in the past.[4]

+120%

We see more than 120% growth in people searching for the online or virtual equivalent of offline experiences, such as "virtual concert", "virtual escape rooms", and "virtual food festival".

+85%

As Indians look for ways to share meals together, even while apart, search interest in "group order" has grown by 85%.

MARKETING IMPLICATIONS

The emotional value of digital

Faced with physical distancing caused by the pandemic, people have adapted how they express themselves and increased their reliance on digital for building personal connections. As a result, brands that invest in the digital as a functional channel are missing out on an opportunity to build and nurture deeper relationships with their customers, where both sides stand to gain and grow through emotional connection.

> Harvard Business Review
> An Emotional Connection Matters More Than Customer Satisfaction
>
> "Emotionally connected customers buy more of your products and services, visit you more often, exhibit less price sensitivity, are more attention to your communications, follow your advice, and recommend you more – everything you hope their experience with you will cause them to do."

1 Build customer love and loyalty by consistently delivering at each touchpoint

Research shows how the consumer's path to purchase is driven by emotions. At each and every touchpoint, shoppers want to feel reassured and empowered; rewarding brands who help them navigate the messy middle.

Leverage the emotional power of digital to provide timely, accurate and relevant information across your organic and paid communication channels.

2 Tap into the value of virtual to augment real world experiences

Not everyone prefers in-person experiences, especially during a pandemic. Consider the value of virtual channels as a means of complementing or augmenting physical experiences, allowing the freedom of choice between online or offline events.

In November 2021, Bacardi India transformed its annual NH7 Weekender music festival into a digital event, using innovation and technology to create an experience that was just as enjoyable as its physical events in the past.

The Korean Tourism Organization (KTO), having recognized Indian consumers' rising interest in Korean culture, released a series of virtual experiences, including VR tours of its tourist sites. The #Experience ran from Sept. to Nov. 2021, with the aim of keeping consumers engaged until cross-border travel reopened. KTO also partnered with brands like Indian e-commerce platform KoiKart to run social media challenges, featuring prizes such as travel discounts.

Google Project Starline is a new 3D technology that combines advances in hardware and software to enable friends, families, and coworkers to feel like they're together even when they're apart.

3 Invest in ad creatives that can connect and inspire

Your advertising efforts can be a key lever to build emotional connection and simultaneously drive campaign performance. In fact, creative is the dominant ROI driver across all media platforms, and especially so on digital.[5]

To bring your brand and products to life, ensure your ads showcase how your brand can help people in their everyday life in an authentic way.

Explore creative best practices to unlock better performance across Google Ads solutions.

Truth seekers

With online misinformation and data breaches on the rise, consumers are more skeptical than ever. Wary of being misled and savvier about their choices, they're also more proactive about finding trustworthy sources, using Search to fact-check claims, scrutinize brand values, and ensure authenticity from the brands they choose to engage with.

In 2021, the pandemic further exposed the dangerous consequences of misinformation, spurring governments across the region to step up efforts to curb fake news. Now, APAC has become more aware of the spread of false information, and are constantly looking for trustworthy sources. In a recent survey, 80% of Indian respondents say it is now more important to find a trusted source of information, compared with before COVID-19.[1]

Consumers, especially Gen Zers, are now more conscious about the mix of both facts and misinformation that can be found online.[2] People are not only sceptical about what they see on the internet, but are willing to proactively seek out accurate information on their terms.

Searches reflect these growing anxieties, with consumers looking for ways to guard against the increasing pervasiveness of fraud and scams. As data breaches reached an all-time high in 2021,[3] searches related to privacy also continued to rise, alongside people's growing concerns about their digital safety.

With truth-seeking behaviors becoming more of a consumer habit as we stepped into a new year, many of their time and resources to ensure the choices they make align with their value systems and beliefs. In fact, 64% of Indians research products before making a purchase to ensure they get the right product or service that meets their needs.[4]

Consumers today don't just check the list of ingredients on a label, they want brands to be accountable and transparent at every step of their value chain, including sourcing, production, and corporate sustainability policies. Regardless of how much they trust a brand, consumers across all age groups will conduct extensive research prior to making their purchases.[5] Instead of simply hoping that brands will be true to their word, consumers are taking matters into their own hands to take proactive steps toward learning and keeping their trust.

This means that for brands, getting ahead of misinformation, focusing on authenticity, and ensuring that messages and communications with their customers has become more important than ever.

SEARCHES

Fact-checking, fighting fraud, and protecting privacy

Searches show consumers increasingly concerned about misinformation and privacy, especially compared to pre-COVID times.[6] In 2021, 70% of APAC consumers say it is now more important to find a trusted source of information, compared with before the pandemic.[7]

+35%

Searches about 'fraud' and 'scams' have grown by up to 35%.

+80%

Is it true

In India, search interest related to misinformation, fact-checking, and fake news, such as 'is it true', grew by 80%.

+27%

Search interest in 'privacy' grew by 27%.

Savvier value systems

As consumers grow more entrenched in their belief systems, they're making sure that the brands they choose also share the same higher purpose. Searches are continuing to rise for topics like sustainability and ethics, while more than half of APAC's consumers have stopped buying products or services that have a negative impact on the environment and society.[8] Conscious consumerism is on the rise in India too, with over 86% of consumers saying that buying sustainable products makes them happy.[9]

+24%

Search interest in 'sustainability' grew by 24%.

Search interest in 'electric scooter' grew by 230% as India's consumers, mindful about sustainability issues, are considering using electric vehicles.

With an increase in deliveries, delivery tracking has become more essential. In India, search interest in 'delivery tracking' rose by 60%.

+60%

Search interest in 'trusted website' grew by 38%.

MARKETING IMPLICATIONS

Trust as brand equity

4

Rising misinformation and record-breaking data breaches have put consumers on high alert, sharpening their values and lowering their tolerance for anything misleading. As a result, trust is now a brand's most important asset. Customers expect proactive transparency and authenticity at a minimum.

> Edelman
> Trust, the new brand equity

"Brands need to be for the people, and guided by the people. Why? Because brand trust ranks higher than brand love."

1 Act intentionally and respectfully to protect people's privacy and earn trust

When users have clear choice and control over their data, they're more likely to trust and engage with brands. In fact, over 70% of APAC marketers have a dedicated strategy to communicate with consumers about data privacy.[10] It's time to consider how you can prioritise your users' privacy concerns to earn their trust.
