YEAR IN SEARCH 2022

INDONESIA
Look back to move your marketing forward

A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. Having weathered three years of disruptive changes, they’re seeking to live life on their own terms and looking to be in control of their identities, lifestyles, and what they value.

We’ve noticed this shift as we analyze billions of searches every year to help marketers uncover meaningful audience insights.
Across Indonesia, searches in 2022 point to how people are standing their ground amid sustained waves of uncertainty. With open minds, quick thinking, and digital savviness, they’re seeking out authentic, fulfilling ways of living, working, and being that suit them, and not simply what life serves up.

We’ve identified three key insights about Indonesians based on what’s top of mind for them as they search. In this report, we dive into the insights, what they mean for your brand, and how you can strengthen your marketing strategy for the year ahead.
Soul searching
After three years of uncertainty, Indonesians are moving past merely coping or going with the flow. They’re reenvisioning who they are and can be, on their own terms. When border restrictions limit people to their backyards, they’re taking the opportunity to dig deep into local traditions, while also connecting with global cultures from home.
People are also looking to be their most full and authentic selves. Following on the heels of the Great Resignation, the Great Exhaustion is sweeping across the world, prompting people to focus more on their well-being and upskilling themselves to land better opportunities. They’re also embracing their individuality and searching with more specificity to satisfy their distinct needs and preferences.
Cultural Identity
Globally connected, locally focused.

We’re seeing a paradoxical dissonance in people’s searches: They desire to be plugged into global culture, but they’re also celebrating what makes Indonesian traditions unique.

This dynamic duality points to the increasing complexity of Indonesians’ identity as global citizens and proud denizens.

Living in a connected world is driving Indonesians to learn more about cultures that are different from their own, with search interest in Japanese culture growing by over 20%.
Asian cuisine crossed borders as search interest in Indian restaurant increased by over 150% in Indonesia.

While search interest in nasi padang in Indonesia was also up by over 20%.
1.2 Personal Identity
Refined searches.

People are searching with greater specificity as they become more aware of their distinctive identities. Whether it’s looking for “unisex perfume” (as compared with just “perfume”) or “heart shape face hairstyle male” (as compared with “male hairstyle” simply), people’s searches reflect their evolving sense of self.

Search interest in unisex perfume in Indonesia was up by over 10%.
Their evolving sense of self is also being reflected in the way they dress, with search interest in “formal dress for men” rising by 50%.
Taking better care of themselves.

Searches for various forms of self-care are also on the rise, including ways to avoid burnout. Indeed, some 23% of people in Southeast Asia say they plan to spend more on self-improvement, including wellness, health and fitness, and education.¹

In Indonesia, search interest in gym membership grew by over 20% and can I change increased by 20%.

There’s a touch of introspection in the air, with search interest in healing jumping by +230%
At the same time, search interest in self reward grew by over 70%, while self development saw a leap of more than 50% in Indonesia.
Embracing diverse identities.

More than ever, people are embracing diverse lifestyles, with Gen Z leading the way in standing up for their personal brand and crafting their own identities.
As Indonesians look to Search to become more aware, search interest in gender equality increased by 60%.

While search interest in self branding increased by 20% in Indonesia.
1.3 Professional Identity
Harmony between work and home life.

Work and home life continue to be parts of a whole but people are now seeking to find a harmony between the two, even if it means resigning from their jobs.

Others are seeking more flexible work arrangements, with 77% of workers saying they value remote work, and 42% saying they would refuse a job if they couldn’t work from home.²

Indonesians are striving to be financially independent, with search interest in financial freedom growing by 50%.

Search interest in remote working increased by 60% in Indonesia.
Indonesians are also feeling emboldened to explore other styles of working. Search interest in work life balance doubled, with over 100% growth.
Upskilling and entrepreneurship.

Just as people are rethinking their work life, they’re also expanding their skills with training, looking for more flexible work, and considering striking out on their own.

Indonesians seeking additional income streams also contributed to an over 50% rise in search interest in “side hustle”.
Search interest in hybrid learning grew by +220%
Marketing implications
Adopt inclusive marketing strategies as a mindset, not a checkbox.

Commit to diversity, equity, and inclusion as a constant responsibility and embed them into every aspect of your brand campaigns, from conception to execution and beyond. For marketing to feel truly inclusive and accessible, brands must understand and regard people holistically, across the full spectrum of what makes up their identity, including gender, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, and more.
MARKETING IMPLICATIONS 01

One way to do this is through nuanced narratives that reflect intersectionality in your messages. Brands that portray women and underrepresented groups positively have greater influence on customer intent.

Dove Indonesia created an inclusive ad to give voice to the bullying that 1 in 2 women in Indonesia face due to their hairstyles. It invited Indonesia’s top female content creators to share how they overcame the bullying they faced, and empower millennial and Gen Z audiences to feel confident, regardless of their hairstyle. Its brand power score among this hard-to-reach group of audiences grew significantly by 30 points.
Think visually beyond text search

Recent innovations in Search are helping consumers find what they’re looking for in more natural and intuitive ways. As people increasingly search with images and text together, think about investing in compelling image assets to bring your ads to life with diverse representation of people and products. This makes it easy for people to see relevant visuals of your products and services, and act - especially on mobile.

In fact, advertisers see a 10% increase in click-through rate when image extensions show with their mobile Search ads.4

Value hunting
As inflation rises, Indonesians are reassessing the cost of things. They’re looking at not only the sticker price but also what they consider to be of value. For instance, people are being more pragmatic and focusing on the essentials, with 40% of consumers making fewer impulse purchases and prioritizing needs over wants.\(^5\) Along the way, people are discovering that wallet-friendly options like second-hand clothing don’t just save money; they can also help to save the environment.

VALUE HUNTING

Trust in a brand plays a significant part in people’s calculations. They’re searching for clear indications of whether a brand provides quality service and reliable products.

And they’re looking for the one that offers the best deal overall rather than the cheapest price. It’s why 77% of Indonesian consumers have switched brands due to “better value”.
2.1 Seeking Value and Knowledge
People are more carefully weighing their buying options.

As costs rise, people are carefully considering how and when they spend, seizing the right moment for the best deals. Globally, search interest for “compared to” remains consistently high, and 73% of shoppers in Southeast Asia are shifting budgets from wants to needs.

In Indonesia, search interest in compare to leapt by more than 50%.

Value shopping is on the rise in Indonesia, with search interest in best price, best deal and best value climbing by +10%.
Seeking greater economic literacy.

As the global economy remains uncertain, people are looking for information to increase their financial and economic literacy, from learning about the causes of rising prices to emerging investment trends, to help make decisions that count.

With the cost of living continuing to rise, search interest in “what is inflation” leapt by more than 50%.
Search interest in why prices are increasing was up by over 120% in Indonesia.

While search interest in how to save increased by 10%, as Indonesians try to budget and plan ahead.
Saving Money and the Planet
Inflation and sustainability are going hand-in-hand in forming an unexpected alliance.

People are discovering that purchases which support sustainability, such as electric cars, can help them be savvier about their spending, especially when petrol prices rise. In fact, 73% of Southeast Asian consumers say they are willing to choose a more sustainable product or service if given the option.\(^8\)
As consumers search for more environmentally friendly vehicles, search interest in electric vehicle leapt by +80%
Search interest in sustainability rose by over 60% in Indonesia.
There’s rising awareness about climate change and its impact on Indonesia. Search interest in carbon footprint leapt by more than 50%.

At the same time, search interest in food waste rose by over 40%.
2.3

Trusted Brands Above All Else
As economic concerns mount, consumer trust remains ever more imperative for brands.
Shoppers enter the messy middle with doubt and skepticism, and they’re scrutinizing brands and products for lasting quality as they search for daily necessities. Among Southeast Asian consumers, three of the top five factors influencing purchase decisions — positive reviews, established brands, and return/money back guarantees — are all strong signals of consumer trust.⁹

Finding joy
In the face of constant waves of disruption, people in Indonesia are realizing that they don’t want to put their lives on hold any longer. While uncertainty persists, people are no longer letting it stop them from living their best lives, whether it’s indulging in a massage or attending their favorite concert abroad. Instead, they’re finding ways to enjoy life’s little luxuries, even if it means making concessions or spending extra time searching for better deals.
People have also merged their online and offline lives into a continuum, with people wholeheartedly embracing the convenience of digital services and the unique magic of offline experiences. As Southeast Asia’s digital economy approaches $200 billion, we see rising searches in digital services like telehealth and instant delivery. At the same time, people are going offline in bigger ways as compared with previous years. Live concerts are back on the calendar, and luxury experiences like Michelin-starred dining are back on the menu.
